The Body Recode Collective - Go-To-Market & Content Strategy

Status: DRAFT v1.0 - 2026-07-19. Written to be reacted to, not treated as locked. Owner: Kade. Scope: how we position, talk about, and recruit for the Collective, and how that shows up in content.

This sits on top of the locked decisions (positioning, commercial terms, the Fit Scorecard funnel, onboarding). It does not re-decide those. It answers a different question: now that the offer and the front door exist, how do we actually bring the right coaches to it - without over-promising before the legal and billing pieces are ready.

01 1. The one-line position (locked)

"A collective of coaches practising to one standard."

The glue is the shared Body Recode method (Doctrine Mode A - interpretation before prescription), not just software. That is what makes it a genuine collective and not a bag of licensees. Every piece of content has to reinforce that one idea: this is a standard you join, not a tool you rent.

02 2. Who it is for (and who it is not)

For: established movement and health coaches who already have

- a defined method they are known for, and
- an engaged audience they already serve,

and who are tired of running their business on a duct-taped stack of tools. They want to own a business, not rent a tool. Modalities supported today: strength/performance and yoga. Pilates and conditioning are next. Anything outside that is gated out for now.

Not for (say this plainly in content): people looking for the cheapest tool, or coaches who want a generic template with the words swapped out. The Fit Scorecard already screens these out - content should pre-qualify the same way, so the wrong people self-select out before they apply.

New/beginner coaches are a separate case - not "not for us," just not for the founding offer yet. See section 2b.

The emotional truth we speak to (established coaches): "You are great at your craft. The business around it is held together with tape." That line (already in the live marketing) is the core wound. Lead with it.

03 2b. The Emerging Coach lane (farm system) - added 2026-07-19

New coaches - beginners without an established method or audience - are not the buyer for the founding Collective. The offer is too heavy, and 15% of few clients is nothing. But they are the largest market, and a coach trained the Body Recode way from day one is the purest expression of "one standard" (no old habits to unlearn). So we do not slam the door - we build a farm system.

- Now (free, no new product): an "Emerging Coach" content + nurture lane. Content that educates and inspires new coaches and plants the standard early, routing them into the Fit Scorecard's amber "building" tier - which today just captures and does little. That tier becomes a real, nurtured waitlist (see section 5).
- Later (Phase 2 product decision, NOT now): a paid ladder for green coaches - method/education entry -> a lighter platform tier -> full Collective membership. Mirrors the consumer ladder (scorecard -> challenge -> blueprint -> membership). Do not open a paid green tier until the founding 10 are signed and proven - widening the paid offer early splits focus and dilutes the founding scarcity that makes the top-tier pitch work.

Messaging split (critical): established coaches hear "own a business, not rent a tool" (they already have a business). Emerging coaches hear "learn to practise to one standard, and grow into the platform" (aspirational / educational). Never mix the two in one post - different audience, different stage.

Why this is low-risk: it costs nothing now (content + an existing tier), it fills the top of a future ladder, and it protects the premium founding positioning by keeping green coaches in their own lane rather than in the founding ten.

04 3. Where the Collective sits (so we never blur the brands)

- Body Recode = the engine. The proven method + platform. What coaches license. "Powered by Body Recode."

- Performance Coaching = the consumer arm. Where Kade coaches end-clients directly. This is the B2C proof that the engine works. Body Recode does not compete with partner coaches for their clients - Performance Coaching does the direct coaching.
- The Collective = the B2B arm. Coaches run their own brand on the engine.

Content rule: Collective content talks to coaches (buy the engine). Body Recode / Performance Coaching content talks to end clients (get coached). Never mix the two audiences in one post.

05 4. Posture: demand-gen + curated waitlist (not a hard sell yet)

This is the most important strategic call in this document.

We cannot sign or bill partners at full price yet. Three things are not ready:

1. Legal - contracts are draft-stage, unreviewed, and still say the old "$20 per client" instead of 15%. Ange is out; a new AU commercial/IP lawyer needs sourcing.
2. Partner billing - charging coaches setup + membership + the 15% is not built.
3. Economics check - the AI cost per client vs. the 15% margin is unconfirmed.

So the strategy is not "fill 10 seats this month." It is:

> Build awareness and drive the right coaches into the Fit Scorecard now, into a curated waitlist, so that the moment legal + billing land, we have a queue of vetted, warmed applicants ready to sign.

This turns the blockers into an advantage: scarcity and curation ("applications are open, seats are limited, we are hand-selecting the founding group") is a stronger sell than "buy now," and it is honest about where we are. We are not faking urgency - the 10-seat founding cohort is real.

What this means in practice: - Every CTA points to the Fit Scorecard (`/collective/apply`), never to a checkout. - "Ready" applicants get a call and go on the founding waitlist. - "Building" applicants get nurtured (they are future cohort 2). - We tell the founding story openly (Melisa as pilot, the build in public) to make the waitlist feel alive.

06 5. The funnel (what exists, what to sharpen)

Already live and working:

Content -> `/collective` (marketing page) -> `/collective/apply` (Fit Scorecard, ~9 questions) -> scored green/amber/red -> - 🟢 ready -> "book a call" + instant SMS to Kade -> founding waitlist - 🟡 building -> tailored "fix this one thing first" -> nurture list - 🔴 not yet -> gentle decline + a resource

Sharpen (small, high-value): - A nurture email sequence for "building" applicants (they are the warmest future pipeline and currently just get captured). 3-4 emails over ~3 weeks. This is also the Emerging Coach farm system (section 2b) - the building tier holds both "nearly-ready established coaches" and "promising green coaches," nurtured toward a future cohort. - A light "founding cohort" progress signal on the marketing page (e.g. "applications open" state) so the waitlist feels real without faking a seat counter. - Make sure the call booking for "ready" coaches routes to the right calendar and pre-brief.

07 6. Channels (per your "both" decision)

Primary: LinkedIn (B2B). This is where coaches, studio owners, and founders actually are. The Collective is a business offer, and LinkedIn is the business feed. This becomes the main Collective recruitment channel.

Secondary: Kade's personal brand, Pillar 3 (AI & Leverage). The Collective is the leverage story - "I built the engine to run my own coaching; now other coaches run their practice on it." This is building-in-public, told first-person on `@kade_dunstone_`. It seeds interest and sends warm people to the Fit Scorecard. It does not replace the LinkedIn track; it feeds it.

Support: email nurture for "building" applicants, and a founding-story email for anyone who applies.

Not a primary channel: consumer Instagram (@body_recode_). That audience is end-clients, not coaches. The odd behind-the-scenes crossover is fine, but we do not recruit coaches from the consumer feed.

08 7. Collective content pillars (the B2B track)

Five recurring themes. Every Collective post is one of these:

1. The Broken Middle - the problem. Great coach, business held together with tape: the tool sprawl, the admin tax, the ceiling you hit when you are the whole system. Agitate the pain the coach already feels.
2. Own, Don't Rent - the model. Your brand, your clients, your business - powered by a proven engine. The opposite of being a faceless affiliate or renting a generic app. "It still answers to you."
3. One Standard - the method as the glue. Interpretation before prescription. Why a collective (shared standard, quality) beats a franchise mill. Not a strength template with the words swapped - built for your modality.
4. Built in Public - the engine as living proof. What it actually does (scorecard -> reading -> body state -> plan), the platform build, the Melisa/Harmony pilot, the behind-the-scenes of building the thing. This is the pillar that overlaps with your personal Pillar 3.
5. The Founding Table - scarcity + curation. Applications open, 10 founding seats, founding terms locked for life, "we only win when you win." Who it is for, who it is not. Every one of these ends at the Fit Scorecard.

Rough weighting per month: Problem/Model heavy at first (2:2:1:1:1 across the five), shifting toward Built-in-Public and Founding Table as the pilot progresses and there is more proof to show.

09 8. Cadence

- LinkedIn (Collective): 2-3x per week, from Kade's profile, sitting alongside the existing Body Recode executive posts and the personal-brand posts (total LinkedIn feed stays ~4-6/week).
- Personal IG Pillar 3 (building-in-public that feeds the Collective): ~1 per week, woven into the normal 3-4x/week personal cadence - not extra load, just making sure one of the weekly personal posts carries the leverage/Collective story.
- Email: founding-story email on application; 3-4 nurture emails for "building" applicants.

10 9. Messaging rules (do / don't)

Do: - Lead with the coach's pain ("held together with tape") before the solution. - Say "own a business, not rent a tool." - Frame it as a standard you join, powered by a proven engine. - Be honest about scarcity - 10 founding seats is real. - Pre-qualify: name who it is not for. - End Founding-Table posts at the Fit Scorecard.

Don't: - Put exact prices ($2,500 / 15% / rate card) in public content - numbers are a verbal + term-sheet conversation. The site shows an ROI illustration, not a price list. Keep it that way. - Promise "buy now" or a checkout - we are on applications + waitlist until legal/billing land. - Talk to end-clients in Collective content - that is the wrong audience. - Use "Studio of Ten" anywhere public - it is retired. It is "The Body Recode Collective" (or "the Collective"). - Use em dashes (house style) - hyphens or rewrites. - Sell yoga/breath as the flagship - the doctrine-aligned front is body-composition/performance; yoga (Melisa) is a deliberate pilot exception.

11 10. What we measure

- Fit Scorecard applications / week (top of funnel).
- Ready-tier rate (quality of who is applying).
- Calls booked from ready-tier.
- Waitlist size (ready + building) - the number that tells us the moment legal/billing land, how much demand is queued.
- Not measuring revenue yet - we cannot bill yet. This is a pipeline-building phase.

12 11. Dependencies (what unblocks the shift from "waitlist" to "sell")

Content can run now. Signing at scale needs, in rough order: 1. New AU commercial/IP lawyer sourced; contracts updated to 15% and reviewed. 2. Entity/liability structure decided (sole trader -> company question). 3. Partner billing built (setup + membership + per-active-client metering via Stripe Connect). 4. API cost-per-client vs. 15% margin confirmed. 5. Melisa signed + onboarded as the first live proof (and the yoga branch merged).

When 1-4 are done, the content posture flips from "apply to the waitlist" to "founding seats now open" - same funnel, harder CTA.

13 12. First 4 weeks of content (skeleton - to be expanded into the calendar)

WEEK	LINKEDIN (2–3)	PERSONAL IG PILLAR 3 (1)
1	Broken Middle x2 (the pain) + Own-Don't-Rent	"I built the engine for my own coaching" (build-in-public)
2	Own-Don't-Rent + One Standard + Built-in-Public	The platform as a live case study
3	One Standard + Built-in-Public (Melisa pilot) + Founding Table	What "one standard" means
4	Built-in-Public + Founding Table x2 (applications open)	"Other coaches are now running on it"

Every Founding-Table post ends at `/collective/apply`.

14 Next steps (build order)

1. Turn this into a Collective strategy dashboard (fresh page, retire the old Studio of Ten one).
2. Add a `collective` brand track to the content calendar.
3. Sweep remaining "Studio of Ten" references in the dashboard -> "Body Recode The Collective."
4. Populate the calendar from the skeleton in section 12, expanded to real hooks.
